

This is Physical Anthropology at the Medical Faculty of Freiburg University. Welcome to our website.

The following overview takes you through the English-language contents. Additional information, especially on teaching and our public outreach in Freiburg, might only be available in German.

Our department is located in the natural sciences campus, near the university hospital (see a map

). We have our own library and a collection of casts from hominid fossil specimens, most of which are on public display.

-> Staff   -> Library   -> Contact us

We are teaching undergraduate courses for Biology students, but there are also scientific talks open to the public. Our researchers engage in various activities and frequently appear in the media.

-> News from the department   -> Upcoming Events in Anthropology   -> Links

Our research covers a wide spectrum from forensics and work with skeletal material from archaeological excavations to clinical applications. Additional to our research staff, we have a number of graduate students working on their theses.

-> Research   -> Publications